

Bucars staff enjoy a long weekend doing what they do best: RV'ing!

Staff from Bucars RV Centre in Balzac, Alberta were up to telling tales and eating shmore's over the May long weekend. Almost 20 hard working employees and two owners set up camp at Little Bow Campground located just east of Champion, Alberta.

Spirits were high and everyone enjoyed a little down time after the usual torrent of work leading up to the long weekend. "It's always the same," says Bucars Service Manager and long time RV'er Paul Sinclair, "we all work our butts off getting our customers ready for the weekend, and we too need to get our own stuff ready. It's kind of ironic actually." Frisbee tossing, golf, board games, and a little R&R were on the agenda for the Bucars crew and their accompanying families. Not too much in the way of selling or service to be had out there in the wilderness.

Each long weekend the Redmond family (the owners of Bucars RV Centre) invite their entire staff, their families, and a number of close friends to the little campground and enjoy the life of an RV'er. "It's something we do every year," says Bucars General Sales Manager and owner Jeff Redmond. "It gives us an opportunity to sit back, relax, and enjoy an activity that we love to do.

In light of recent news about foul play and inappropriate behavior at campgrounds and regional parks, the Redmond's would like to remind those who RV that we all have a responsibility to respect our parks and leave the lightest foot print possible. "It's a must for the people we associate ourselves with," said Redmond. "There is no excuse to not clean up after yourselves or abuse what we normally take for granted. We packed up Monday in the pouring rain and made sure every last bit of garbage was accounted for. I can see how some people might be tempted to leave some things behind, but we have to look out for those using the area after us, as well as the plants and animals that call home the land we use so selfishly sometimes."

Staff members are back at work after the May long weekend, diligently working on the increasingly busy RV'ing season.
